

Cattle Can Be Raised Successfully In Lake Okeechobee Region Despite The Mosquitoes

Experience Of Past Few Weeks Proves That It
Can Be Done

He substantiated his statement by evidence and practical experience gained from nearly ten months of actual cattle fattening operations in the Glades, during a

Even as bad as the mosquitoes have been in the past few weeks, the largest single Everglades herd, numbering over 125 head, is now in splendid condition showing no apparent loss of weight. An inspection tour of the herd by this reporter showed conclusive evidence the cattle are not suffering from the mosquito infestation, and are grazing as actively and are as

The cattle, it has been found, altered their grazing habits so that now they feed and fight mosquitoes at night and rest in the shade during the day. As further conclusive evidence of the normal condition of the herd, a large load of the finest cattle yet marketed from the cattlemen's pens was purchased by a West Palm Beach distributor, concern only two weeks ago. The herd had successfully withstood the mosquito infestation for over two weeks. Previous to this, and included in the period during which the mosquitoes were especially bad, the finest load of baby beef was marketed from the same herd to the same concern.

According to one prominent Glades farmer, who has actively engaged in farming in this section for the past 20 years, the only animals known to have been killed by mosquitoes during the summer months were animals tied to the end of a chain and unable to reach brush or lake advantage of other effective means of fighting the insects.

difficult periods in Glades history. A drouth lasting six months, blighted pasture to some extent during a period when the bulk of the feeding was performed. In spite of this handicap, the cattle continued to develop and gain weight. When rains finally arrived, the grass quickly returned to its original lush condition and the cattle regained loss in average

Rain fell in unusually great amount for two or three weeks and left many fields standing in water. Despite the saturated condition of the muck pasturage, not one case of sore-feet or any other disease has developed, according to the cattleman.

The mosquitoes, reportedly the worst in five years, have not in the least affected the condition of the local herd. Seventy-five head of cattle are grazing on 75 acres of Torrey Island pasture while approximately 60 head are grazing on 35 acres of pasture within the Belle Glade town limits.

Both pastures contain native Para and Napier grasses and none of the dry foods or molasses have been rationed to the herd. Although lacking a finished cover, the grass and feed is far superior to tanged

The longer cattle are kept on Everglades grass, the better the quality of meat produced, according to the Glades cattleman. His findings show that the local grasses are exceedingly high in proteins, a solid meat producer. As the weight limit of protein is reached, the cattle tend to add a heavy layer of fat as usually found in dry feeds containing carbohydrates. In time, according to the cattlemen, the local herd will be supplemented in their feeding programs with stall feeding. The heavy meat cover can be added with grasses alone, however, in approximately six months, according to the cattlemen.

Twenty years ago, cattlemen in the Glades sold meat for Miami markets labeled "Western." The beef was produced entirely from native grass with long periods of feeding converting protein into layers of fat. Glades cattlemen

"Youth Movement Within Rotary." He described a talk by Darrel Brady, Minneapolis, on the youth movement, with special emphasis on the Boy Scout activities, as perhaps the clearest example of a national farm publication. Mr. McMillan was reported to have said that "agriculture is the most important industry in the world today." He also pointed out that "as agricultural income increases, so does the nation's income."

On the social side, Mr. Hooker reported that the Governor's Ball, held Tuesday evening in the municipal auditorium, was the most popular function. Over 3,000 persons were in attendance, he stated.

In conclusion, Mr. Hooker said he had voted for Ed Bentley, Lakeland, as a delegate to the International Rotary directors' convention. He was defeated by 8 votes, however. His vote and the club's votes were cast for President Henry, who was elected by a wide majority to head Rotary International for the coming year.

Guests in attendance were Rev. Henry Travolta, visiting pastor from Tennessee who is filling the Canal Point Methodist pulpit and who will fill the Pahokee pulpit next Sunday. He was accompanied by his wife, Mrs. H. A. Dean, and Mrs. S. E. Jordan, who is filling the Canal Point Methodist pulpit in the absence of Rev. Fred L. Martin, Hub City, Pa. Walter Hooker and Phil Clarke, Belle Glade Rotarians.

A director's meeting was held immediately following the regular session.
